Does the construction project require a building permit?

- Yes
 No

*A separate permit may be required for each individual structure outlined in a project (e.g. house, swimming pool, detached garage). A separate permit may be required if your project entails major upgrading or if multiple disciplines are involved such as electrical, cooling/heating (HVAC) and plumbing.

If yes, at what times during your project is it recommended that you schedule inspections?

Inspection Schedule

You may have a number of inspection requirements during your construction project depending upon the type of project and the permits it requires. Please consult your local building department for requirements that pertain to your project. Permit requirements, details, and inspections will vary depending on the type of project you are planning.
