

Speaker

Dr. Christy Hill has a passion for spiritual formation. She felt a call in high school for God to use her in forming the spiritual lives of people. This quest took her to study Christian Education at Wheaton College and Talbot School of Theology, eventually getting her PhD in Educational Studies.

There has always been a personal dimension to her studies, as her own development has been spurred on by spiritual communities. God has developed her compassion for people and her ministry skills along the way, as well, by putting her in various settings outside her comfort zone. These include working with underprivileged families in Mexico, discipling junior highers and adult singles in California and equipping women for ministry in the local church. She currently teaches undergraduate and graduate students in the School of Ministry Studies at Grace College and Seminary in Winona Lake, Indiana.

to seek personal transformation

What does it mean to be an image bearer?

How does this God-given identity guide
my vision for my life?

What is God's vision for me as a woman?

How do I break free from the lies that have shaped my view of myself as a woman?
