to benefit

Challenge Golf

The Edwin Shaw Rehabilitation Challenge Golf Course was the first facility in the nation designed specifically to provide recreational therapy to persons of all ages recovering from strokes, spinal cord or brain injuries, amputations, neuromuscular disorders, as well as visual or developmental challenges, or those with less disabling impairments, such as hip or knee replacements.

It is designed to assist all individuals, both disabled and able-bodied of all ages, in learning the game of golf for the first time or experienced golfers in need of adaptive assistance. The entire program has been a model and information resource for similar programs, both nationally and internationally.

With your help, thousands of people locally – adults and children with physical and mental challenges – will continue to experience the benefits of golf, including confidence, self-esteem and new friendships.
