

DEN CHIEF TRAINING

A Den Chief is a Boy Scout who assists a Den Leader with their den. He is a role model for the boys in that den and the pack. The Den Chief understands the Cub Scout program since he was a Cub Scout once himself. The impression he leaves on your Cub Scouts may be the determining factor in whether or not they crossover to a Boy Scout Troop. This is a position of responsibility for Boy Scout advancement. Although the training is designed for Den Chiefs, the adult leaders who will work with them are also encouraged to attend so they understand the role of the Den Chief.

Every effort should be made by Troop and Pack Leaders to carefully select boys for this extremely important position and ensure that they receive training, counsel and support during their tenure. The obvious starting point in this process is BSA Den Chief Training.
