And that's a wrap for the NTAP 2008 Training Season! See you all in the new year. 18 minutes ago from web

Server use is about 33 - 40% higher than last year. 26 minutes ago from web

There are about 100,000 documents on the NPADO server but it can easily handle more. 26 minutes ago from web

Pro Bono sponsoring monthly calls for support. 33 minutes ago from web

A2J is just the user interface for the client interaction. You still need the HotDocs for the full template production and use. 41 minutes ago from web

When you upload the template you can restrict it just to advocates (rather than make available to pro se) if that is your audience. about 1 hour ago from web

You can make changes on your local desktop to the template then republish to NPADO and keep the same URL. about 1 hour ago from web

Test both on your desktop, then upload and test online because there can be some tweaks. about 1 hour ago from web

The NPADO legal services community is unique in this fashion. The for profit community doesn't have this bank of templates. about 1 hour ago from web

You can launch the interview and view it as if you are a user. You can download the whole template via zip file. about 1 hour ago from web

Access the "contributor portal" to access all the templates. You can search by topic/practice area, sort by state or sort by developer. about 1 hour ago from web

The beauty of the NPADO system is that new users can access other templates previously created. You don't need to start from scratch. about 1 hour ago from web

A2J author development is a different system but has some similarities. Creating interview, logic flow, client "steps to the courthouse." about 1 hour ago from web

Oops, should have clarified, template is created in HotDocs Pro. about 1 hour ago from web

Then test and refine. Repeat! about 1 hour ago from web

Then when the template producer moves onto to automating the document including "if" logic, computations, help screen for users. about 1 hour ago from web

To start making template substantive expert works with the template producer.

Indicating things like "if this then include this language".. about 1 hour ago from web
