Noticera/Newsletter - APRIL 2003

A Note from the Chair....

The Coordinating Committee had a wonderful meeting with the San Antonio MALCS Site Committee chaired by Norma Cantú. The Site Committee has been working very hard to make the Institute a very special gathering for us. It is truly going to be an exciting and provocative event for us all. Of course, much of the success will be dependent upon your participation. I encourage each of you to find ways to join us in San Antonio in August. Given the state of world, our nation and issues that continue to confront our communities it is imperative that we come together to forge a new vision for this century.

As you many of you know, we will also be discussing proposed changes to the structure of MALCS and your participation is critical. The proposed changes were noted in the Winter Newsletter. Again, we welcome comments and suggestions. Also, your participation is needed to elect new leadership. This year elections will be by ballot following the Institute after the membership has been validated. During the regional and caucus meeting, nominations will be explored.

The CC will develop a slate for consideration and nominations will be taken from the floor at the second business meeting.

Editors: Norma E. Cantú and Gaye Okoh

The role of the leadership of MALCS is central to the new visioning that is necessary to position our work in this Century.

I look forward to seeing you in San Antonio to work together in new ways, to learn about the research and teaching we are pursuing, to explore solutions to the many issues that confront us, to learn about our successes, and to offer support and encouragement so that we might continue on our journey toward creating a better world for all mujeres.

Call for Proposals for the Irene Ledesma Prize.

Irene Ledesma, Chicana labor historian who completed her doctoral degree in U.S. history at Ohio State University in 1992, died an untimely death from kidney failure in 1997. Shortly before she died, Professor Ledesma's groundbreaking article, "Texas Newspapers and Chicana Activism, 1919-1974," published in the Western Historical Quarterly, 1995, received the "Joan Jensen-Darlis Miller best article of 1997" award from the Coalition of Western Women's History. Also in 1997, the CCWH established a $1,000 graduate student prize, the Irene Ledesma Prize, in recognition of Irene's contribution to women's labor history in general, to Chicana labor history and women's "Western" history in particular.

(See Ledesma -2-)

(Ledesma) Noted Chicana historian Antonia Castañeda, who teaches history at St. Mary's University in San Antonio, TX, is the 2002-2004 Chair of the Irene Ledesma Prize Committee for the CWWH. She invites all her colleagues to honor Irene Ledesma's memory by nominating outstanding graduate students whose work fits the criteria. The award is intended to help defray travel and/or other research costs for advanced graduate students working on a topic on women in the "West." Please do not hesitate to call Prof. Castañeda at (210) 436-3608, or write, acastaneda@stmarytx.edu, if you have any questions.

The Columbia University Oral History Research Office annual Summer Institute on Oral History
June 16 - 27, 2003

Telling Lives: Memory, Orality and Testimony in Oral History

Our focus will be on the ethical, methodological and theoretical challenges of documenting the power of testimony, and oral history, to shape public discourse and strengthen communities whose histories have been subjugated or silenced within dominant historical paradigms and media accounts. Within these parameters, we will explore the subjectivity of gendered, ethnic, cultural and other identity based narratives - particularly the ways in which these accounts subvert and correct public myth and memory. We will also probe the ways in which oral history, in its historical origins and its contemporary uses, is a radical form of testimony in which both collective and individual memory are preserved in texts, and other media, as social history and literary genre.

The application deadline is May 10, 2003.
