PERSONAL ESSAY

(Essay should be one to two pages type-written and double-spaced)

“Social capital” refers to the friendships, acquaintances, and working relationships that tie people together. When people are invested in each other and their communities, they are more likely to care for one another and to cooperate even when they have differences.

Where social capital is strong, it is easier to mobilize people to tackle problems. It is easier to take advantage of opportunities that benefit everyone. Social capital is built through hundreds of everyday actions, large and small, that we all do.

The Frank, Ada & Elizabeth Compton Scholarship supports students who build social capital within their school and/or between their school and community.

Please answer one of the following questions:

- What do you do that helps bring different people together in your school, and what has happened as a result?
- What do you do that helps bring students at your school together with people in the community who are not already connected to the school, and what has happened as a result?
