

AUBURN UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT'S GRADUATE OPPORTUNITIES PROGRAM

Auburn University seeks applicants to the President's Graduate Opportunities Program (PGOP) beginning with the 2008-2009 academic year. The major purpose of the Program is to recruit, retain, and support African-American students engaged in graduate study leading to a doctoral degree from Auburn University. Successful applicants will receive a $10,000 PGOP Fellowship in addition to a stipend of the minimum amount set by the Provost's Office for 25% FTE each year. This additional stipend is provided by the department, school, or college in which recipients are enrolled. Both the fellowship and the departmental stipend are renewable for up to four years of doctoral study.

QUALIFICATIONS: In order to be considered for a PGOP fellowship, candidates must hold an earned degree from an accredited institution, meet admission standards of the Graduate School and the doctoral program in which they seek to enroll, and be recommended for the PGOP award by that academic department or unit.

APPLICATION PROCEDURES: Potential candidates for the PGOP should submit, at the address listed below, a completed PGOP application form, a résumé and a letter of interest which identifies the proposed area of doctoral study.

DEADLINE FOR APPLICATION: On or around April 1, 2008, the PGOP Selection Committee will begin to review candidates who have met all qualifications for the Program. Review of qualified candidates will continue until all fellowships have been offered and accepted. However, those interested in being considered for the Program are strongly advised to have completed all application steps before March 1, 2008. Applicants should be aware that it usually takes at least four weeks for completed applications to be reviewed by the Graduate School and academic department. Some departments have earlier deadlines.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF AWARDS: PGOP awards will usually be announced in late May.
