

Protect Yourself And Your Customers

Can you trust your employees? How far? If your business is providing janitorial services to other companies, you know how vulnerable you are to employee dishonesty. After all, your employees have access to your customers' assets, equipment, supplies, and personal belongings.

In addition, your employees are easy targets for blame. Any customer who finds something missing is likely to suspect those who do the cleaning.

The fact is, dishonest employees can significantly damage your business. These true stories from our files demonstrate what can happen.

- An employee was cleaning an auto dealership. A customer left his keys in the night drop; the employee stole the keys and the vehicle. The employee drove the car to another city and wrecked it. Damages totalled $8,417, which the Surety Company paid.
- An employee was cleaning a law office and found two envelopes containing cash in an attorney's desk drawer. She stole the money and bought a car. The Surety paid the full bond penalty of $5,000.
- A newly hired employee cleaning in a bank stole $ 10,000 cash from the vault. It was his first day on the job. We covered the full $ 10,000.
