

Notice by Buyer:

Cancellation for Seller's Breach

- 🔊 If you don't get what you wanted by the time you wanted it...
- 🔊 This a letter used by a buyer when the seller has breached an Agreement for the Sale of Goods, and that the buyer expects to be compensated for damages following the breach.
- 🔊 A buyer uses this notice when goods have been delivered, but do not "conform" to the agreement (the goods were delivered but they are not what the contract specified) and when the seller has breached the contract in some other important way, such as failing to deliver the goods on the required date.
- 🔊 It is often better to simply reject the goods at the time of delivery (using a notice like the "Notice of Rejection of Non-Conforming Goods"), rather than using a notice like this one to cancel the contract for breach.
- 🔊 Immediate rejection also makes the seller's case more difficult if the parties go to court. If the goods are rejected, the buyer may not have to pay for them, but if the goods are accepted and the contract is cancelled, the buyer usually has to pay for the goods and hope to recover the money in damages.
- 🔊 In order to reject the goods, the law requires the buyer to send the rejection notice within a "reasonable time" after delivery of the non-conforming goods.
- 🔊 If the buyer does not send the rejection notice within the time allowed, the buyer loses the option of rejecting the goods (the buyer cannot use the Notice of Rejection of Non-Conforming Goods). However, the buyer is still entitled to damages, and can still use this Notice of Cancellation for Breach.
