Celebrate June Dairy Month with SUDIA

By Southeast United Dairy Industry Association

While June may symbolize the start of summer across the country, to Mississippi dairy farm families, June symbolizes something else – National Dairy Month!

Join Mississippi dairy farm families and the Southeast United Dairy Industry Association, Inc. (SUDIA) as we celebrate 78 years of June Dairy Month and encourage consumers to “Get more with milk.” This June, SUDIA will honor the accomplishments of more than 3,000 dairy farm families across the Southeast who are dedicated to dairy, sharing their stories of producing wholesome, nutritious dairy foods to consumers across the United States.

National Dairy Month began in 1937 as a way to promote dairy consumption during peak milk production in the summer. Today, its rich history continues with communities, companies, and people from the Southeast celebrating in a variety of ways, including festivals, contests, celebrations and even a special night dedicated to dairy farmers at the ballpark.

In 2014, more than 13,000 Mississippi dairy cows produced 21.9 million gallons, or approximately 188 million pounds, of milk. The top five milk producing Mississippi counties were: Marion, Tate, Lincoln, Walthall and Pike.

Mississippi also has a strong presence in the milk production and processing industry, and is home to two commercial milk processing plants located in Hattiesburg and Kosciusko. In addition, Mississippi is home to three on-farm milk bottling plants.

This year’s theme, “Get More with Milk,” focuses on the consumer, and encourages families to make milk their first beverage choice due to its unique package of vitamins, minerals and nutrients that are an essential part of a healthy diet. Dairy farmers will be working alongside SUDIA with local media and farm bureaus to promote dairy and engage consumers through social media, radio contests, T-shirt giveaways, events and more.

June also marks the 100th anniversary of the National Dairy Council, which was formed on behalf of dairy farmers and the dairy community. It was initially comprised of registered dietitians and nutrition experts, to provide science-based education to consumers. The National Dairy Council (NDC) plans on celebrating at events hosted nationwide, focusing on engaging consumers with the dairy industry and promoting programs such as the National School Lunch Program or Fuel Up to Play 60.

Milk Provides Great Taste, Good Health Benefits

By Brittany Jacks
MSU Ag Communications

Drinking a beverage that tastes delicious and has good nutritional value is like having your cake and eating it, too.

Brent Fountain, associate professor of food science, nutrition and health promotion with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said milk is a good source of protein. Protein provides the nutrients the body needs to build and repair bones, muscles, cartilage, skin and blood. Milk is also a good carbohydrate source, providing the body with energy. Calcium and vitamin D are also important nutrients found in milk.

“Dairy products, including milk, have been linked to improved bone health and may reduce the risk of osteoporosis as we age,” Fountain said. “Dairy products also have been associated with a reduced risk of cardiovascular disease, type 2 diabetes and lower blood pressure, due to milk’s potassium content.”

What about people who are lactose intolerant or choose a vegan diet? Fortunately, there are alternatives for individuals who cannot or do not use dairy products.

The primary reason for not consuming dairy products is an allergy to the protein found in milk or an intolerance to the lactose. Lactaid is one of the products provided to some people who lack the lactase enzyme to help with digestion.

“For others, goat’s milk is an alternative. Goat’s milk has a similar nutritional profile to cow’s milk,” Fountain said. “Others choose not to drink dairy products for personal reasons. Nondairy milk can be made from soy, coconut, almonds or cashews.”

For the more health-conscious individuals, there are certain things to look for when purchasing milk. The first is fat content, and the second is added sugar.

“By consuming skim milk, the calories reduce to 80 with zero grams of fat. Other forms of dairy, such as ice cream, yogurt and cheeses, can be selected as low-fat varieties,” Fountain said.

The concentration of butterfat has been known to improve the taste of milk for many people.

Stephanie Ward, assistant professor at the MSU Department of Animal and Dairy Science, said some cattle feeds can help increase the butterfat content.

“The forage-to-grain ratio in the ration can affect the concentration of butterfat, which will impact the taste, creaminess and consistency of the milk,” she said. “For the most part, however, milk is a very consistent product. When you consider that milk is the mother’s way of providing nutrition to her young, it makes sense that her body will regulate the consistency and safety of the product.”

One of the most popular real dairy products is chocolate milk.

“The addition of chocolate flavoring improves the taste of milk for most people, and it was also shown to be an excellent source of nutrition for athletes recovering from intense activities,” Ward said. “Additionally, many beverage companies are currently developing products that are milk based but have even more added protein to target the health-conscious market.”

Dairy Days of Summer

By Lise Foy, Director
MS Agriculture & Forestry Museum

June is a good month for several reasons. It's a month when the weather sort of stabilizes into summer. Fireflies are out in the evening, and temperatures are good for porch-sitting and swimming. It's not too hot just yet, the crops are in the ground and growing, the spring calves have grown a little and are running and playing. It is the month we celebrate our Fathers and enjoy the Summer Solstice.

Some interesting things in our history happened in the month of June. On June 7, 1775, the United Colonies became The United States. On June 22, 1847, doughnuts were created. On June 9, 1934, Disney's Donald Duck made his debut.

There are a few notable national days of celebration in June. National Ice Tea Day is June 10, International Picnic Day always comes on June 18, and chocolate ice cream, as well as ice cream soda days are celebrated June 7 and 20 respectively.

June is National Dairy Month!

Before the 1600's, cows gave milk only during the spring, summer and fall while they could be pasture fed. The small amount of milk given was enough to support the family on the farm. Once stall feeding came about, the year-round production of milk became possible and farmers began to keep more cattle and sell the surplus milk, marking the beginning of the dairy industry.

Development and growth of dairying in the United States began around 1840. Pasteurization, refrigeration and better methods of transportation, like the railroad, allowed the scale of milk production to increase. Today, milk is number fourteen in Mississippi crop production, with ninety-five Grade A dairy herds comprised of 13,000 cows. It is a $45 million industry in Mississippi.

At the Ag Museum, there are a few opportunities to learn about dairy products. An exhibit in the Heritage Center Gallery features artifacts including glass milk bottles, a cream separator, and milking equipment. Cloverbelle the cow, who lives in the 4-H Museum & Learning Center, is always ready to help teach people how to milk a cow. She is a life size replica of a Holstein. Visitors can also watch a video about milk in the 4-H Museum.

My favorite dairy 'opportunity' at the Ag Museum is in the General Store. A cold glass bottled Barq's root beer with an ice cream sandwich is an excellent way to celebrate dairy.

Everyone in my family loves ice cream. Ice cream is so important in my family that my brothers and I had a charge account at Morman's Drug Store for a 'cone of cream' every day after school. Mrs. Edna Earl, who called everyone honey child or sweet thang, would pile it so high on the cone that Mr. Morman surely never made any money off the ice cream case.

Before the development of modern refrigeration, ice cream was a luxury reserved for special occasions. Making it was quite laborious; ice was cut from lakes and ponds during the winter and stored in holes in the ground, or in wood-frame or brick ice houses, insulated by straw. Many farmers and plantation owners cut and stored ice in the winter for use in the summer. I am not sure, however, how prevalent this practice might have been in Mississippi, since our winter ice pack is somewhat limited.

Ice cream was made by hand in a large bowl placed inside a tub filled with ice and salt. This was called the pot-freezer method. In the pot-freezer method, the temperature of the ingredients is reduced by the mixture of crushed ice and salt. The salt water is cooled by the ice, and the action of the salt on the ice causes it to melt, absorbing latent heat and bringing the mixture below the freezing point of pure water. The immersed container can also make better thermal contact with the salty water and ice mixture than it could with ice alone.

The hand-cranked churn, which also uses ice and salt for cooling, replaced the pot-freezer method. The exact origin of the hand-cranked freezer is unknown, but the first U.S. patent for one was issued to Nancy Johnson on September 9, 1843. The hand-cranked churn produced smoother ice cream than the pot freezer and did it quicker.

Today, ice cream is mass-produced and is widely available. It can be purchased in large cartons from the grocery store. During this month of June, remember to give thanks to the dairymen who care for and milk the cows that give the milk used to make that glorious ice cream.

Mark your calendar for July 11, from 10:00 AM until 2:00 PM, for the Small Town Country Fair at the Ag Museum. Enjoy a slice of watermelon, watermelon seed spitting contest, and old fashioned games. Join us any day at the Ag Museum to enjoy an ice cream novelty at the Small Town, Mississippi General Store!

The November 2014 fire has not stopped the Museum's effort to teach the next generation about the importance of agriculture and the innovations our ancestors developed to feed, clothe, and house themselves. Rebuilding efforts are underway, as well as continuing efforts toward the master plan renovations which began in 2013. If you would like to make a donation to the 'Raising the Barn' campaign, make checks payable to the Mississippi Agriculture Museum Foundation, 1150 Lakeland Drive, Jackson, MS 39216.

The Ag Museum is located at 1150 Lakeland Drive in Jackson and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. In addition to our gallery and exhibit spaces, the Ag Museum also has room for your event, whether it's a meeting, a wedding or other special event. Call (601) 432-4500 for information.

Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Hay, Forage Producers Wage War on Fire Ants

By Linda Breazeale
MSU Ag Communications

Southern farmers may never win the battle against imported fire ants, but aggressive tactics can slow the pests' invasion, reduce damage and prevent further spread across the United States.

Jane Parish is an Extension/research professor with the Mississippi State University Extension Service and the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station. She said cattle and hay producers have learned to live with and work around the troublesome ants since the pests arrived in the state almost a century ago.

"Fire ants are a painful aggravation. No one can do farm work without getting stung from time to time," Parish said. "Their mounds can damage cutting equipment, and if a calf is born too close to a bed, the results can be catastrophic, especially for weaker calves that may already have health issues."

Parish said producers may believe effective control costs are too high on larger farms like the Prairie Research Unit that she manages in Monroe County, but spot treatments in certain areas can be helpful.

"If only treating part of the farm, calving pastures should be a first priority to help protect cows lying down to calve and their newborns from being born into a heavily infested area," she said. "Hospital pens and receiving pens on stocker operations would be examples of other high-priority areas to treat."

Native to South America, imported fire ants first entered the U.S. around 1918 at the Port of Mobile and made their way into Mississippi in the 1930s. They have since spread to every county in the state and throughout most of the Southeast.

Rocky Lemus, an associate Extension/research professor, specializes in grazing and forage systems. For most Mississippi hay producers, forage is grown in spite of fire ants. The pests can be more trouble in square-bale fields when hay is hauled by hand.

"Monitor for fire ant activity in and around hayfields. When the numbers are high, treat with broadcast baits according to label directions," Lemus said. "Take care to avoid getting treatments on hay bales."

Lemus said commercial hay producers must be aware of fire ant quarantine lines to reduce their spread across the country.

"Fire ants have moved across the South and into isolated areas of California and New Mexico," he said. "Quarantines control the movement of some products, like soil, plants and hay, to help stop the spread of these invasive pests."

Producers can ship hay from inside the quarantined area to other locations inside that quarantined area. Hay destined for locations outside the quarantined area must be certified as fire-ant free by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce's Bureau of Plant Industry before it can be shipped.

Lemus said most of the requirements for certification refer to storage conditions, not growing conditions.

"Baled hay that is stored in direct contact with the ground will not qualify for certification and cannot be moved outside the quarantined area," Lemus said. "Trucks and trailers will also need to be cleaned of any soil before loading."

Consult local Extension agents or look online for additional quarantine requirements.

"Before hay is approved for shipping outside the area, an inspector from the Bureau of Plant Industry will place an attractant on the hay to determine if fire ants are present," Lemus said. "If clear and all other standards have been met, a certificate will be issued to accompany each load to the destination and provided to the recipient."

Extension entomologist Blake Layton said fire ants can be controlled in pastures and hayfields with granular baits, ideally before major infestations occur.

"Baits work slowly, so they need to be applied as preventatives or deterrents," he said. "One annual treatment -- ranging from $8 to $15 per acre -- will reduce populations, but to eliminate or prevent mounds around a barn or paddocks, more than once a year will be necessary."

Layton said to read and follow label directions closely.

"Not all fire ant baits are labeled for hayfields and pastures," he said. "The three active ingredients currently labeled for use in forages are methoprene, pyriproxyfen and hydramethylnon."

He warned that dry mound treatments containing the active ingredient acephate, common in home lawn treatments, leaves illegal residues that are dangerous to livestock.

"Only purchase enough fire ant bait for one season because the oil in the baits will go rancid and no longer attract ants," he said.

Rains Brought Challenges for Strawberry Growers

By Susan Collins-Smith

Seemingly endless rains this spring challenged Mississippi's strawberry crop.

"The frequent rains we had in the last few months put pressure on the bloom and fruit quality," said Bill Evans, a horticultural researcher with the Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station. "In April alone, we got more than seven inches of rain."

The wet weather compounded poor winter growth by further reducing flowering and fruit set and increasing disease pressure, said Evans, who is based at the Mississippi State University Truck Crops Branch Experiment Station in Crystal Springs.

"High volumes of rain reduce the fruit's sugar content, and many producers had fruit rot on the vine," he said.

Although several growers had produced fewer strawberries, Myron Unruh of Lazy U Farm in Macon, said he had a decent year.

"Our strawberries did good," Unruh said. "It wasn't spectacular, but we've had worse years for strawberries."

Unruh said despite the battle against fungal disease this year, his berries were average in size and were quite tasty, according to his customers.

"I've had to spray fungicide several times this year with all the rain," said Unruh, who grows the crop on three-quarters of an acre at his agritourism operation. "But the size has been average or above, and people are telling us that they were exceptionally sweet this year."

In addition to other summer crops, such as watermelons, tomaatoes, green beans, okra and peas, Unruh and his wife, Shelia, grow fall crops and offer activities throughout the year for families and school groups. For more information on the Noxubee County farm, visit <http://www.lazyufarm.com>.

Evans said most of Mississippi's strawberry growers produce the crop on one acre or less for local markets.

"There has been an increase in interest from people who want to grow half an acre to an acre of strawberries," the MSU researcher said. "So, we are preparing to do a strawberry variety trial here at the station to determine which ones perform best."

The value of production for Mississippi's horticulture industry -- which include berries, vegetables, melons, potatoes, fruits, tree nuts, nurseries, greenhouses, floriculture, sod and Christmas tree farms -- was estimated at $114 million in 2014. Farmers markets followed suit, growing from 23 known markets in 2006 to 84 markets by 2014.

These markets provide exponential benefits for growers, consumers and communities, including more nutritious food options, low-cost sales channels, educational opportunities for the public and improved community relationships.
