From the Principal

Dear CCHS Families,

As we close down fall, it is a great time to consider our blessings. When I reflect on mine, I can't help but count the wonderful CCHS families who continue to volunteer and support our mission for lifelong learning, along with spiritual, personal and academic excellence. We have witnessed our students attending Friday morning masses, weekly confessions along with building character through athletic, music and academic team spirit. All of these interactions help form a foundation and create memories for years to follow.

I am focusing on dress code and CCHS families will soon be receiving a letter and brochure on modesty. I thank you for helping me address and monitor this issue.

Parent-Teacher conferences seemed to generate a good deal of open communication and plans for improvement. I continually reinforce how important quiet study time at home can be. Focusing on homework at home curbs the tendency to come to school unprepared and reduces any temptation to copy another's work. I always encourage parents to unplug, disconnect and sit quietly at the kitchen table, with everyone doing some quiet paperwork. This really does make a difference.

If your student is struggling in a class, please first encourage him or her to see the teacher for help before you consider a tutor. Know too that our textbooks all have on line resources for your student to get the concept of a lesson re-taught and outlined. If each struggling student takes the time to check out the on-line resources, she or he may have a better grasp as one completes homework.

School projects are encouraged at CCHS to give students more hands-on approaches to learning. Please let the projects remain in the hands of the students. Parent encouragement is helpful but working out the details and getting teacher clarifications are all part of the project process. If parents take over too much, the student is cheated out of the opportunity to learn to problem solve and work with other students as a team! Thanks!

November is the month that I remind parents and students of our Safety Crisis plan. "Lock Down" procedures of precaution and protection are covered with faculty, staff and students. If we ever feel a serious threat, we will immediately go into Lock Down status, keeping students in classrooms until police determine a time for safe evacuation. Teachers have an overview of procedures to best keep everyone safe. One measure will be to have students turn off cell phones so as not to jam police communications. Students who are outside for Wellness classes or at other locations will not enter the building during a Lock Down. These students will go to McGraw Park Pavilion and then to St. Patrick Church of Merna. We will always follow the guidance and direction of the police and ask that parents wait for press releases from them. Hopefully, this will not happen, but I do want you to know that we continually assess our safety and review emergency procedures with staff as well as with our local police.

May the holiday season bring families together in love and peace and allow Christ to be present in all we do.

Blessings,

Joy Allen
Principal

Advancing the Mission

The beginning of November marks the chief feast day for Central Catholic - All Saints Day. We are reminded on this feast once again of the primary aim for everyone at Central Catholic and the Church in general - To Be Saints!

One characteristic of Saints is that they learn by example and lead by example. As St. Paul says, "Be imitators of me, as I am of Christ" (1Cor 1:11). Imitation is not only the sincerest form of flattery, it is also the way our Church has grown for over 2000 years. Imitation is why Saints come in bunches and why Saints' names are passed on. Saints are among us, not only to lead lives of holiness, but to demonstrate holiness to lead others to Christ.

Soon you will receive a copy of our Annual Report. We distribute this report to not only recognize generosity, but to also inspire generosity through imitation. Just as St. Paul called the church of Corinth to look to him for inspiration, we call our Central Catholic family to look to our honor roll of donors for inspiration in thinking about Central Catholic in a philanthropic manner. And just as we have the witness of Saints in every generation and in every walk of life, we hope our annual report shows that whether you're a grad of 2009 or 1935, a grandparent or current parent and whether you give $15 or $5000, it is a significant contribution to the work of the school.

With Saints, imitation does not imply sameness or a cookie cutter version of holiness. The inspiration passed down from St. Teresa of Avila to St. Therese of Lisieux to Blessed Teresa of Calcutta led each to vastly different expressions of holiness, but influenced generations all the same.

Similarly, the generosity of the Central Catholic faithful may take on various forms and vastly different expressions. The mode and amount of your gifts are far less important than your willingness to give. Whether your gift is to the Fund for Central Catholic, to support our parishes in the Together in the Work of the Lord Campaign, to volunteer for Saints Alive 2012, or to bring your generosity to bear in some other way, the fact that you are willing to go the extra step for Central Catholic is worthy of imitation.

Grace and Peace,

Homecoming Address - John Carter '91

CEO Jack Lewis Jewelry

I was a little nervous about coming back to my Alma Mater to give the homecoming address so, I did what anyone of you would do...I turned to Facebook for advice. I posted the following status on our Jack Lewis Jewelers page:

"CEO John Carter is speaking to his high school, Central Catholic, this week during the Homecoming assembly. What words of wisdom should Carter impart?"

I got some interesting answers:

Kelly wanted to know if I was "old enough and wise enough" to speak to you yet

Jerry: It's not a job if you do what you love, there's always time to listen, givers gain and the older you get the more you wish you had spent more time with the ones you love

Tasha: Maybe something about how it's great to have fun, but to remember that however they choose to act now is how others will perceive them. It's easier to look back at high school days and think of how you could have done something different. They have the choice now. Is who they are now in line with who they want to be?

Good luck John! You'll do great! Hope they listen...even if they're texting at the same time. :)

But probably the best advice I received this week came from a former schoolmate of yours, Kathleen Becker, who still works with us at Jack Lewis. When I told Kathleen that Mr. Fabrizio asked me to speak this morning she asked me...how long?

I said, "I don't know. He said about 5 or 10 minutes." Kathleen told me (and she is ALWAYS polite) "Probably should keep it to 5. Nobody cares what you have to say...they are all just excited about open lunch." SO 5 minutes it is (maybe 7)

So the topic today, as it ALWAYS is at homecoming from the speaker and graduate of this school from the not so distant past is: What has Central Catholic meant to me in my life?

Well for me, Central LITERALLY was the beginning of my career in an industry that I love. Jack Lewis Jewelers has had a long tradition of hiring students from Central Catholic. We ALWAYS have at least one or two of you poking around our store.

One day, the dean of students, Mary Jean Kraft came to me and said "Carter. Do you have a job?" I did, in fact, have a job as a bus boy. So I replied, "Yes I do. But I hate it." She said, "How would you like to work in a Jewelry store?" I said OK and was more or less hired because Mrs. Kraft vouched that I was a good kid.

You can imagine that TRUST is a big part of what I seek in a new employee. And we have always known (even back before I owned the store) that if a member of THIS faculty said one of their students was a good kid...then they were the right choice. I can tell you, and not just because I went here, that this school produces GOOD KIDS. And why do you think that is?

These teachers and faculty members are not here for the money. EVERY time I come back to this school, at least one of them comes out of the woodwork and greets me with a smile, a hug, and they want to know how my life is going. EVERY time.

It is my own personal homecoming each time I visit and I leave here feeling like a special part of the tradition of this school...even though I'm a VERY small part. I promise you one thing...this does not happen in a large public school.

Fifty-two people in my graduating class and I can name all of them. How many other high school graduates in this town do you think can say that?

In college, my freshman year, I found myself in lecture halls of 300 students or more. Bigger than ALL of Central Catholic at the time I was there.

It can feel lonely and intimidating when you are used to the comfortable surroundings of a school where you know everyone and everyone knows you. Enjoy your time here because it is a unique experience that only happens once in your life.

The ironic part of me speaking to you here today is that I was told my senior year by a member of the faculty that I would return to make this address. This person pulled me aside after the homecoming assembly to ask me what I thought of the speaker.

Then he said he had no doubt that my life would take me in such a direction of success that I would return to share my story with the school that I love. Who was the faculty member? Chuck Shanaberger.

And while he is not here for this talk, I know he had everything to do with me being here today because in those few words, he instilled in me the faith that I COULD succeed.

It is THIS kind of faith in their students that makes this place so special. OF COURSE, the TRADITION here is incredible. I am the third generation to attend Central Catholic in my family. And I was the LAST of six kids to do so. My 10 week old daughter, Lila will be the 4th to come here.

These halls are filled with old pictures and faded trophies but the accomplishments of our graduates tell tales that old relics never can. You stand in the shadows of great graduates. They left this school not just with an academic education but also a religious one as well.

And it is your faith that I want to challenge you on today. Your parents send you to Central Catholic for a reason. Think about it. I'm sure NONE of them need another bill to pay. Why not send you off every day for a "free" education? They sent you here to nourish your soul as much as your mind.

As Catholics, we are typically very hesitant to openly talk about our faith. But what you will find is that this leads to many Catholics being ignorant about the teachings of their own Church. Every year you take some sort of a faith-based class.

When I was here, Mr. Fabrizio taught one of my favorites: World Theology. He taught us not just the history of OUR Church but also the roots and teachings of Protestants, Hindus, Buddhists, Jews, and Muslims. In order to appreciate your own faith you must know where these others have come from. Right?

National Merit

Laura Rees was named a National Merit Commended Student, recognizing the top 5% of students nationally, based on her performance on the PSAT last year.

Testing

The PSAT was given to 134 Central Catholic students on October 12. Most members of the junior class took the test, and all students enrolled in Sophomore Accelerated English tested as well.

The PLAN test is scheduled to be administered to all sophomores on Tuesday, November 15. The PLAN test is a pre-ACT exam. It serves as a predictor of future ACT scores and allows students to prepare to do their best as juniors.

Rotary

The September Rotary Students of the month were Thomas Bernhardt and Patrick Wieland. The October students are Jackie Hinderks and Annibal Torres. Maureen Christensen and Mallory Paul have been selected as November students. Greg Mason, CCHS senior enrolled in the BACC Culinary Arts II program, has been named the November Rotary Student of the Month for the Bloomington Area Career Center.

College Applications

The CCHS Guidance Department has been focused the past two months on students completing college applications, as many colleges have early admissions deadlines of November 1. Our policy is to have all students have their applications completed by October 31. All college bound seniors should have completed an account on fastweb.com. Fastweb is a scholarship search database. Students should also check the websites of the colleges to which they are applying in order to find scholarships that the institutions make available.

You are part of a Church that was founded by Christ, Himself. Know that. Appreciate it. Defend it. And BE PROUD of it. DO not turn your back on it. EVER. Not for marriage. Not for politics. And Not For your friends.

I am many things in this world, a husband, a father, a son, a brother, an uncle and a business owner. But I remind myself daily that I am a Catholic first. Serve God everyday and the rest will follow. I learned that here.

As in my day, I also know that there are many of you who are NOT Catholic but your parents send you here anyway? Why? For some, I suppose you might think it's sports. But even if this is the case for most of you, your parents know that the values taught to you here jive with the ones they've taught in your home.

I didn't really have an appreciation for my faith until I was released into a world that attacks it on a daily basis. They are arming you here with what you need to defend it if you'll only listen.

Remember that you attended Central CATHOLIC. We call this school Central for short so often we forget the last part.

Do yourself a favor while you're here. At least once a week focus on what makes this school different from all the others you could be attending. Be thankful for the all school masses and the opportunities to attend confession and make sure you keep these things as a part of your life when you leave.

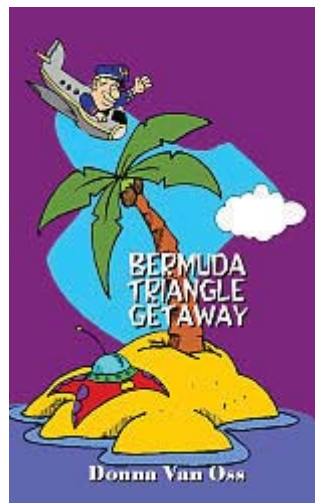

OK, enough of my preaching...Enjoy your time at Central Catholic. It will continue to shape you long after you have left the comfort of its walls. I've talked to just for a few minutes (hopefully just 5 Kathleen) about what it continues to teach me. TRUST in its students that I hire on a regular basis. The TRADITION that I experience every time I have a conversation about this school. The ENCOURAGEMENT that I have received from the CCHS faculty. And most importantly the FAITH that it filled me with...both in myself but also in my God.

So good luck tonight Saints! I will be there with my new family cheering you on!

I'm sure we'll say another of these before the assembly ends but I'd like us to say a prayer for the safety of our students and players on this homecoming weekend: Hail Mary...

From the Chaplain

As we begin the month of November, we are reminded that it is time to make our plans for Thanksgiving. When and where are just a few of the questions we need to answer. This past month we have been hearing in our parishes about the new English translation for our own faith-filled thanksgiving, the Sacrifice of the Mass. The Mass is our thanksgiving to God for all the blessings He has bestowed on us. It is our way to say thank you for His many gifts, but most especially the gift of His only Son.

November is also the month the Church dedicates to the dead. We start as always praising God for the Saints in Heaven and their faithful witness. On November 2nd, we commemorate all the faithful departed on All Souls Day. The Mass itself is the principal sacrifice that we offer to the Father on their behalf. So this is a good month to renew our commitment to our Faith and its practice by joining together and offering this Sacrifice to the Father on a regular basis. This month is an opportunity for us to renew our celebration of this memorial of our salvation and our thanksgiving to God for all the blessings that He has bestowed upon us. Our Bishop is calling us to renew our practice of celebrating this memorial in our lives so that we may join the saints in heaven in praising Him and worshipping Him for all eternity. May the Blessed in Heaven continue to intercede for us, and may we continue to intercede for the poor souls in purgatory. May our lives grow in love of Jesus our Lord through the Sacrifice of the Cross and our celebration of it in the Sacrifice of the Mass.

All Holy Men and Women, pray for us!
