Brain Gym®

Brain Gym®

Are you interested in:

-  Learning physical activities that assist in changing ineffective learning and behavior patterns?
-  Learning how to develop whole brain integration in all areas of your life?
-  Applying Brain Gym activities to classroom and family issues related to behavior?
-  Developing an effective, ongoing stress management program?
-  Getting your students focused and ready to learn?

Brain Gym is a learning readiness program practiced in 80 countries in over 30 languages. This program is a brilliant synthesis of physical movements that facilitate change in ineffective patterns of learning and behavior, making it beneficial for teachers and students who are striving to meet the requirements for NCLB. It assists those with the challenges of dyslexia, attention deficit and autism as well as aspiring athletes, artists, health care practitioners and business professionals.

Based on the findings of brain research and the experiences and knowledge of many developmental technologies, Paul Dennison, Ph.D., created a model system often referred to as EDU-K that was originally used in remedial reading clinics. Since 1990, Brain Gym has been selected by the National Learning Foundation as one of today's leading approaches to education. The Brain Gym movements are practiced in homes, schools, learning centers and businesses worldwide.

Beth Stoddard, MBA, is a licensed Brain Gym instructor and educational kinesiologist who gives workshops and courses throughout Maine. Beth has taught, coached and consulted since 1960 and has discovered that Brain Gym facilitates all kinds of learning. In her private practice, Beth trains individuals and families and helps them to reach their goals (www.trainthebrain.biz).
