

Presentation Skills for Executives

In this era of electronic communication, it is more critical than ever that executives have the capacity to communicate their ideas, principles and recommendations face to face, to guarantee their message is both listened to and understood.

Information is based, both on the way in which it is communicated and how it is received by the audience.

Brendan Walsh Communications has packaged a highly effective two day program for business executives that will dramatically enhance their capacity to communicate effectively and convincingly.

This program is presented in a non-threatening, engaging two-way style, where executives learn through interactive discussion and through each others' experiences.

The program covers core elements of face-to-face communication, planning and preparation for business presentations and a wide range of delivery skills suited to all business presentations.

Brendan Walsh has trained thousands of business executives in communication skills.

Sincerely,

Brendan
