IMPORTANT: HOW TO USE THIS LIST

Asset code belongs to Type, and Type belongs to Group to create a hierarchy. Do not mix codes from different rows. They will fail to load and will be returned to you for corrections.

Although we historically called it a "Code" it's actually an asset class or category. The value from column F below is the only value you should put in the "Asset Code" column in your report.

Always be sure to work with the most recent version of the code list. The codes can be downloaded from http://aset.azdoa.gov/planning-and-strategy-applications.

If you are using a PDF version of this list we strongly recommend that you download the Excel file from the above web page and work from that instead.

Use the filters to help find the codes you need. You can filter the list by clicking on the list box control at the top of each column and check the items you want to see.

Telecommunications items in Gray are being replaced. You can still use them if necessary however it is preferable to use the appropriate Type and Code under Network Hardware for network equipment or Storage for SAN switches.

If the product is not on the list check the newest codes first for one of the new generic categories that best describes the product. All codes added in 2013 are highlighted and can be easily filtered using the filter controls.

If you still need a code added contact Raj Kollengode (raj.kollengode@azdoa.gov) for assistance. Please do not make up your own codes.

Spelling mistakes and typos will fail to match and will be returned to you for corrections. Please be accurate.

Excessive use of "Other" will be returned for corrections. Please take the time to find the best match for your assets without
