

The BME Mentoring Program is a service organized by the students of the Biomedical Engineering Society

Who is it for?

Mentors: Juniors and Seniors

Mentees: Freshmen and Sophomores

-Each underclassmen that signs up, will be assigned an upperclassmen mentor within the Biomedical Engineering Program at UConn.

How can Mentors/Mentees interact with each other?

This is really up to the individuals, but could include:

- Meeting up for lunch a couple times each semester
- Attending upcoming BMES events together
- Staying in contact via e-mail, phone, or AIM.

What are the benefits for Mentees?

- Advice on which courses to take
- Suggestions about finding internships
- Someone to talk to about the various BME tracks
- A friendly face in the BME program

What are the benefits for Mentors?

- Development and practice of leadership skills
- Involvement in the BME community
- Satisfaction in helping a young student

How do I sign up?

- Complete the form on the next page and bring to the BME Main Office, Bronwell 217
- Email the information from the next page to BMEMentoring@gmail.com
